Other Indie Favorites

The Radleys: A Novel, by Matt Haig (Free Press, $25) "The Radleys have secrets like other families, and one in particular that will rip your throat out. Matt Haig puts a wicked British twist on suburban family drama. Wry and racy, with the right fire in the blood to keep you turning pages late into the night, The Radleys is a story about a family tearing things apart. Come closer, there's something you need to see here!"
—Geoffrey Jennings, Rainy Day Books, Fairway, KS

Toward the Setting Sun: John Ross, the Cherokees and the Trail of Tears, by Brian Hicks (Atlantic Monthly Press, $26) "Few have heard of John Ross, yet he is surely one of the 19th century's greatest heroes. In the face of a systematic and aggressive campaign to take Cherokee land, Ross defended his people with both ferocity and dignity. Brian Hicks is a skilled writer and historian and this work is enlightening, powerful, and highly recommended."
—Christopher Rose, Andover Bookstore, Andover, MA
