Other Indie Favorites

The School of Night: A Novel, by Louis Bayard (Henry Holt & Co., $25) "This swift, witty mystery moves between Tudor England and the present day as a group of bibliophile treasure-hunters sleuth out the lost discoveries of a secretive academy of Elizabethan intellectuals. Bayard is a master of historical texture and literary suspense!" —Mark David Bradshaw, Watermark Books, Wichita, KS

It Happened on the Way to War: A Marine's Path to Peace, by Rye Barcott (Bloomsbury, $26) "Rye Barcott's unstoppable drive to do good in the world leads him to concurrent forms of public service. To serve the Kibera slum of Nairobi, Kenya, he co-founds the organization Carolina for Kibera (CFK). To serve his country, he joins the Marines and trains to be a Human Intelligence Officer. This book will restore your faith in humanity, and remind you how much impact one person can have." —Andrea Avantaggio, Maria's Bookshop, Durango, CO

Another Indie Favorite

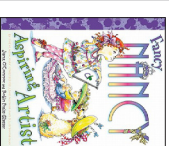

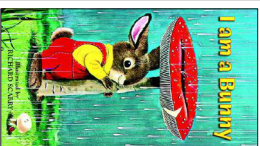

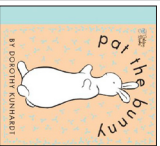

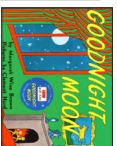

Reading Lips: A Memoir of Kisses, by Claudia Sternbach (Unbridled Books, $14.95) "Sternbach shares the stories of all kinds of kisses: the first kiss that didn't even happen; the kiss at the end of a rousingly successful catering event that eventually led her to her life partner; a tragic blind-date kiss that ended in pain; an ever-so-tender goodbye kiss to a deceased cousin; the stolen kiss from the lifeguard at Bible camp. Interconnected essays form a charming and engrossing memoir. After all, 'a kiss is still a kiss.'" —Nancy Simpson, The Book Vault, Oskaloosa, IA

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers

Exposed, by Kimberly Marcus (Random House Books for Young Readers, $16.99) "This poignant free-verse novel, told from the point of view of teenage photographer Liz, is powerful stuff. Marcus deftly uses clear language to create a story of tangled emotions. The concepts of friendship, family justice, and trust are all called into question when Liz's best friend, Kate, suddenly starts acting distant. This shocking, well-crafted book shakes up perceptions, explores creativity, and invites the reader to think about shades of gray. Teen book clubs, here's your next pick!" —Tegan Tigani, Queen Anne Books, Seattle, WA
