Other Indie Favorites

A Moment in the Sun, by John Sayles (McSweeney's, $29) "Spanning five extraordinary years at the turn of the 20th century, A Moment in the Sun captures a pivotal moment of global social and political change, the charge toward industrialization, the dawn of United States imperialism, racial strife, and celebration. Sayles' genius is in allowing his characters' voices to come alive, each recounting adventure, violence, tribulation, or discord, each becoming more vivid than the last, as dialogue and dialects dance off the page. This is Sayles' major work, a sprawling epic, a gripping yarn, a literary Guernica!" —Kevin Hunsanger, Green Apple Books, San Francisco, CA

The Wilder Life: My Adventures in the Lost World of Little House on the Prairie, by Wendy McClure (Riverhead, $25.95) "If you are a fan of the Little House books, The Wilder Life is for you! Wendy McClure loved the series as a child, and as an adult spent a year traveling around to historic spots from the series. She made it to the little house in the big woods, museums, and a Laura look-alike contest. This book is charming and funny and reminded me again why I loved these books as a child. McClure does an excellent job giving us a glimpse into the real life of Laura Ingalls Wilder and her devoted fans, young and old." —Sherri Gallentine, Vroman's Bookstore, Pasadena, CA

Another Indie Favorite

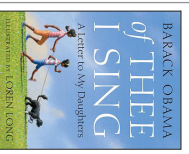

Eleven: A Novel, by Mark Watson (Scribner, $15)
 "The problem with many complexly plotted postmodern novels is that the authors are so involved with their own cleverness that they forget to tell a story you want to read. Eleven is just the opposite: a hilarious, heartwarming story of intersecting lives so entertaining, with characters so engaging, it's only after you've finished tearing through its pages that you realize how clever the plot was. Late-night radio host Xavier fled to England and isolated himself from human contact after a tragedy back home in Australia. But after he hires a cleaning lady he meets at a speed-dating event, everything starts to change. Fresh and delightful!" —Stacie Williams, Boswell Book Company, Milwaukee, WI
