Trespasser: A Novel, by Paul Doiron (Minotaur, $24.99) "Maine Game Warden Mike Bowditch is back on the job, following his introduction in Doiron's debut, The Poacher's Son, and once again he's tripping over bodies. He is called to the scene of an accident in which a car hit a deer, but when he arrives neither the deer nor the driver are there. He is convinced by a state patrolman to leave the matter to the state police, but the situation continues to haunt Bowditch. Where would a young woman go on a cold, snowy Maine night? Devastated when the truth is revealed, Bowditch risks all to finally bring a killer to justice. Doiron is an author to watch!" —Vicki Erwin, Main Street Books, St. Charles, MO

The Homecoming of Samuel Lake: A Novel, by Jenny Wingfield (Random House, $25) "Wingfield has the storyteller's gift, and she writes her debut tale of preacher-without-a-church Samuel Lake and his family with the assurance of a seasoned author. After the death of his father-in-law, John, Samuel moves his wife, Willadee, and their three children into his mother-in-law's house in rural Arkansas. John used to run Never Closes—a bar that stayed open all night—from the back porch of his house. Calla, his wife, runs Moses—a convenience store that is open all day—from the front porch. Inside the house between those two porches, an extraordinary family lives a life complete with love, lust, heartbreak, heroics, and miracles." —Jill Miner, Saturn Booksellers, Gaylord, MI
