Other Indie Favorites

Ten Thousand Saints: A Novel, by Eleanor Henderson, (Ecco, $26.99) "Reminiscent of Michael Cunningham's A Home at the End of the World, though with a definitely original voice, this sweeping, powerful first novel touches on the themes of teenage angst, suburban disaffection, and the punk scene in the late 1980s, while also tackling the larger subjects of love, identity, complex family relationships, religion, and sexuality. You'll fall in love with the characters and want to hang out with them after the book is through. In one word: 'Wow!'" —Carol Schneck, Schuler Books & Music, Okemos, MI

The Shooting Salvationist: J. Frank Norris and the Murder Trial That Captivated America, by David R. Stokes (Steerforth, $26.99) "J. Frank Norris was the pastor of a mega-church before the concept existed. To many he was a righteous and inspiring hero. To others, however, he was brash and abrasive, the object of scorn and hatred. On July 17, 1926, Norris shot and killed an unarmed man in the church office. Stokes presents the complete story of the shooting, the criminal trial, and their aftermath. Eighty-five years ago this event captured the attention of the entire nation, and modern readers will likewise be enthralled by the skillful presentation of this shocking crime." —Christopher Rose, Andover Bookstore, Andover, MA
