Other Indie Favorites

Among the Wonderful, by Stacy Carlson (Steerforth, $27) "Among the Wonderful is an historical novel rich with images of 1840s Manhattan and the exhibits—both living and preserved—that populated P.T. Barnum's American Museum. Outwardly freakish but inwardly just like you and me, the characters Stacy Carlson has created remind us of our common humanity. Ana Swift, one of Barnum's human exhibits, draws us into this world of hawkers and gawkers and voyeurs with uncommon intelligence, heart, and grace. Ana's story is universal: it is not what you see on the outside that truly counts."—Susan Morgan, The Yankee Bookshop, Woodstock, VT

Girls in White Dresses, by Jennifer Close (Knopf, $24.95) "This book is smart, hilarious, and sincere, a combination both rare and, here, perfectly balanced. The series of interconnected short stories features Isabelle, her family, and her group of close friends as Isabelle grows up and moves from being a reluctant member of her older sister's wedding party to attending numerous friends' weddings. But this is not just a book about getting married. It is a book about growing up, being a girl, being both a friend and a girlfriend, and trying to find one's place in the world. It is also incredibly funny—laugh out loud, spot-on funny!" —Sarah Baline, Politics & Prose, Washington, DC

Patrick in a Teddy Bear's Picnic and Other Stories, by Geoffrey Hayes (Toon, $12.95) "Geoffrey Hayes understands children. From their sense of humor to their attention span, the Theodor Suess Geisel Award winner nails it. His words and pictures speak to children of all ages and are sure to elicit laughter: Patrick follows a little bear as he picanics with his loving mother, dodges big bully bear, and avoids naps at all costs. This is a perfect book for anyone learning to read!" —Becy Quiroga, Books & Books, Coral Gables, FL
