Other Indie Favorites

Lightning Rods, by Helen DeWitt (New Directions, $24.95) "Joe, an out of work encyclopedia salesman, has a lot of ideas. Most are useless, but he stumbles upon a solution to the problem of sexual harassment and low productivity in the workplace. His unconventional idea is an immediate hit for corporate offices, but Joe is then forced to take on the stigma of being very successful at something that is revolting to most. Reminiscent of the writings of both Shteyngart and Palahniuk, Lightning Rods avoids pretension by being bizarrely funny and satisfyingly sardonic." —Rachel Haisley, The King's English, Salt Lake City, UT

Mourad: New Moroccan, by Mourad Lahlou (Artisan, $40) "Foodies and book-lovers rejoice! Lahlou's new book is the perfect title for your holiday gift list. This cookbook reads like a memoir, with an engaging introduction by the self-taught chef, several special sections to help the home cook get started, and more than 100 recipes that are perfectly presented, all interspersed with beautiful food and location photographs. You'll want to read this cookbook from start to finish, but save time for cooking—the food is delicious!" —Roni K. Devlin, Literary Life Bookstore & More, Grand Rapids, MI
