Other Indie Favorites

The World We Found: A Novel, by Thrity Umrigar (Harper, $25.99) "Umrigar's latest recalls the halcyon days at university in 1970s Bombay, which were characterized by intense friendships, fierce ambitions, and a determination to change the world, as remembered by four women whose lives have ended up radically different from their collegiate dreams: one, dying in America, whose last wish is to see her three friends, two living in upper middle class Mumbai, and the fourth who has been long-estranged from their circle. Painful secrets, both past and present, threaten to prevent the reunion. This marvelous novel is both fascinating and disturbing by turns." —Emily Crowe, Odyssey Bookshop, South Hadley, MA

Running the Rift: A Novel, by Naomi Benaron (Algonquin, $24.95) "Named for the Rwandan god of thunder, Jean Patrick Nkuba is destined for Olympic glory. Pushing his body up the misty hills of his village, he dreams not only of fame, but also of bringing peace to his country and equality to his Tutsi compatriots. When the floodwaters of hatred and war with the Hutu burst out over his homeland, Jean Patrick must run a different kind of race in order to survive. Both beautiful and heart-rending, horrific and hopeful, this novel carries a message that deserves to be widely read." —Amanda Hurley, Inkwood Books, Tampa, FL

Another Indie Favorite

Country of the Bad Wolves: A Novel, by James Carlos Blake (Cinco Puntos Press, $17.95) "In the early 1800s, Irishman Roger Blake Wolfe arrived in New Hampshire, married, and fathered twin boys. Within a year, he was executed for maritime piracy in Veracruz, Mexico. One twin, Samuel Thomas Wolfe, fought in the Mexican American War on the Mexican side, married, and lived in Mexico City. His twin, John Roger Wolfe, became very wealthy and lived on a hacienda near Veracruz. John Roger and his wife had twin boys, who are the very meat of the book—a sprawling, magnificent story of three generations of men, their fortunes, loves and losses, during a fascinating time in the history of the United States and Mexico."

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers

Lola and the Boy Next Door, by Stephanie Perkins (Dutton Juvenile, $16.99) "Familiar characters Anna and St. Clair appear in this companion novel to Anna and the French Kiss. Lola, who wears outrageous, fun outfits, thinks she has the perfect life with her family and hot rocker boyfriend. But then her old next-door neighbors, the Bell twins, move back into their house. Cricket Bell, the boy 'next door,' was one of her good friends growing up, and Lola finally has to deal with her feelings for him. As in her previous novel, Perkins accurately describes what it is like to be a teenager and the angst of figuring out a relationship." —Jenny Cohen, Waucoma Bookstore, Hood River, OR
