Other Indie Favorites

Heft: A Novel, by Liz Moore (W.W. Norton, $24.95)
"Heft is a novel both heartbreaking and hopeful, with characters who navigate the waters of love and family as if afraid of drowning. Arthur Opp, initially larger-than-life only in the physical sense, emerges as an intelligent and caring man, who the reader eagerly cheers on in his attempts to trust himself and others. Moore's writing hums as she gives voice to those we've chosen not to hear and illuminates those we've chosen not to see." —Dawn Rennett, The Concord Bookshop, Concord, MA

The Mirage: A Novel, by Matt Ruff (Harper, $25.99)
"Here's another page-turning, mind-reeling masterpiece by Ruff. Imagine a world where the United Arab States is threatened by Christian fundamentalist terrorists, a world where a few good Homeland Security Agents have to fight corruption and conspiracies to protect all they believe in. I predict this is the novel that everyone will be talking about in 2012. And it's not just provocative, it's a darn good read!" —Tegan Tigani, Queen Anne Books, Seattle, WA
