Other Indie Favorites

The Right-Hand Shore: A Novel, by Christopher Tilghman (Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $27) "This tale opens in 1922 with Miss Mary, the stern matriarch of The Retreat—the massive Mason family property on the Chesapeake Bay—interviewing Edward Mason, one of two distant descendants of the original immigrant owner, as she decides to whom she will leave it all when she dies. Told in a series of vignettes, the homestead's proudest as well as most brutal moments are recounted by those whose lives are intertwined—for better or for worse—with the Masons and with The Retreat. A vivid and haunting look at the power of family and place by a master storyteller." —Jill Miner, Saturn Booksellers, Gaylord, MI

The Gods of Gotham: A Novel, by Lyndsay Faye (Amy Einhorn Books/Putnam, $25.95) "It is 1845 in New York City and its first police force has hit the streets at the same time the potato famine has hit Ireland. As the Irish pour into the city so does the hatred, bigotry, and violence that Timothy Wilde, a newly hired copper star, is expected to eradicate. The Gods of Gotham transports the reader back to the sights, smells, sounds, and lingo of 1840s New York City utilizing vivid characters, a stunning setting, and language that will grab you and not let go." —Karen Briggs, Great Northern Books and Hobbies, Oscoda, MI

Another Indie Favorite

It Happened on the Way to War: A Marine's Path to Peace, by Rye Barcott (Bloomsbury, $17) "Rye Barcott's unstoppable drive to do good in the world leads him to concurrent forms of public service. To serve the Kibera slum of Nairobi, Kenya, he co-founds the organization Carolina for Kibera (CFK). To serve his country, he joins the Marines and trains to be a Human Intelligence Officer. Drawing on his experiences and the people around him, Rye applies what he learns in Kibera to the challenges of the Marines, and vice versa. This book will restore your faith in humanity, and remind you how much impact one person can have." —Andrea Avantaggio, Maria's Bookshop, Durango, CO

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers

The Selection, by Kiera Cass (HarperTeen, $17.99) "In this dystopian setting that overlays a futuristic society with the things we love about old-fashioned fairy tales, Cass weaves an intriguing story with the perfect balance of real-world problems and romance. America is a young, proud girl with a big heart and a bit of a temper from an impoverished family and social class. She's a talented, self-respecting character who is great fun to follow in this fantastic Bodiceor-type setting. I can't wait for the sequel!" —Larissa Genschaw, Children's Bookshop, Kent, WA
