Other Indie Favorites

The Care and Handling of Roses With Thorns: A Novel, by Margaret Dilloway (Putnam Adult, $25.95) "Galilee Garner needs a kidney transplant. At 31, single, and teaching science in a private school, she breeds roses for pleasure. Dialysis every other day and her roses keep her life busy and organized. Then her 15-year-old niece shows up at school needing a place to live, and turns Galilee's life upside down. No longer able to think only of herself, she must come to terms with her responsibilities, and eventually realizes that change is inevitable, and could even be for the better!" —Beth Carpenter, The Country Bookshop, Southern Pines, NC

Home Is a Roof Over a Pig: An American Family's Journey in China, by Aminta Arrington (Overlook Press, $26.95) "Few authors are able to take us inside the daily lives of the Chinese people and turn a spotlight on both the shades of difference between our societies and, perhaps more surprising, the similarities. Love of family, desires for the future, and hope for growth and advancement are themes found in these pages. But so, too, are the pain of generational gaps, fear of change, and interpersonal prejudices that still lead to harshness and even violence. If you want to look through a window at the real China of today, this is the book to read." —Linda Bond, Auntie's Bookstore, Spokane, WA
