Other Indie Favorites

Memoirs of an Imaginary Friend: A Novel, by Matthew Dicks (St. Martin's Press, $24.99) "Imaginary friend Budo has been protecting his human friend, Max, for five years from everything from the class bully to awkward situations in public bathrooms. He worries about the day when Max will stop believing in him, and he will disappear forever. When Max is suddenly in danger, Budo must decide between Max's happiness and his own existence in order to save his friend. It doesn't take much imagination to know that this is a great read!" —Grace Firari, The Velveteen Rabbit Bookshop, Fort Atkinson, WI

John Saturnall's Feast: A Novel, by Lawrence Norfolk (Grove Press, $26) "John Saturnall, raised by his healer mother, grows into an extraordinary cook in late 17th century England, where he serves the landed gentry during intense political upheaval. His destiny lies in preserving the art of the ages-old feast at which all are treated as equals at the table. Clandestine love, intolerance, and intrigue are all mixed with recipes and brought to life in lush language. This novel has it all: a great story, writing at its finest, and a beautifully designed presentation!" —Sheryl Cotleur, Book Passage, Corte Madera, CA
