Other Indie Favorites

The Stockholm Octavo: A Novel, by Karen Engemann (Ecco, $26.99) "Emil Larsson, a mid-level bureaucrat in late 18th century Stockholm, is drawn into a web of intrigue and magic when Mrs. Sparrow, the proprietress of his favorite gambling den, insists on reading his cards because he is a 'Seeker' who must find his 'Eight' to ensure a positive outcome in an event of historical importance. Fans of historical fiction will enjoy this sumptuous novel and appreciate the expertly explored Scandinavian setting." —Susan Taylor, Book House of Stuyvesant Plaza, Albany, NY

Consider the Fork: A History of How We Cook and Eat, by Bee Wilson (Basic Books, $26.99) "Interest in the evolution of human food culture has always been popular. In Consider the Fork, Wilson invites readers to examine this evolution in a new light. She discusses the transformation of kitchen tools and utensils throughout human existence as well as the implications these transformations have on how humans cook and eat. Wilson's air of curiosity and amusement makes for an enjoyable read; pots and pans have never been more interesting, and the intermingling of anthropology, history, and sociology is certain to spark further thought next time a spork or a blender is encountered!" —Lucy Beeching, Avid Bookshop, Athens, GA
