Another Indie Favorite

Ghana Must Go: A Novel, by Taiye Selasi (Penguin Books, $16) "Readers know when they are in the presence of something special and brilliant. It is a voice familiar and kind, a plot careful and unraveling, a set of characters whose hearts pound between the covers. Selasi delivers a powerful debut about family, race, and the nature of story in this contemporary novel, set in neighborhoods from Brookline, Massachusetts, to Lagos, Nigeria. A literary descendant of Zadie Smith and Arundhati Roy, Selasi is a new force in the global community of readers." —Nicole Magistro, The Bookworm of Edwards, Edwards, CO
