Another Indie Favorite

Kind of Kin: A Novel, by Rilla Askew (Ecco, $14.99) "The nature of this wonderful novel set in small-town Oklahoma is like its characters—raucous, messy, uncertain, and foolishly brave. After a surprise immigration raid on Mexicans that scoops up even some respected citizens, everyone struggles to understand where they stand and how to act. This is a large, kind-hearted story of less than perfect folks caught in a maelstrom while still trying to abide by their ethical and spiritual beliefs. Askew's story is a most timely look at who is welcome into our lives and how we express and share compassion even when times are tough and language is a barrier." —Sheryl Cotleur, Copperfield's Books, Sebastopol, CA
