Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers
Roomies, by Sara Zarr and Tara Altebrando (Little Brown Books for Young Readers, $18) "Roomies is a novel in two voices—that of Elizabeth, a Jersey girl who is preparing to fly across the country to escape life with her mom for a new start at a San Francisco college, and Lauren, a Bay Area native who is torn between a need for some space of her own and worry over leaving her big, chaotic, loving family. Assigned to be roommates, they begin a summer-long correspondence, progressing from mini-fridges to deeper concerns about friends, family, and boys. As the first day of school—and move-in day—approaches, tensions at home spill into their new and fragile friendship, making each girl wonder about her ability to take this next big step toward adulthood." —Sara
