The Collector of Dying Breaths: A Novel of Suspense, by M.J. Rose (Atria, $25)

"Jac L'Etoile, the heroine first introduced in The Book of Lost Fragrances, is quickly engulfed in a quest to create an elixir that will bring souls back to life using a person's last, dying breath. Her patrons are the mysterious Greek heiress Melinoe and her stepbrother, Serge, whose sibling relationship raises many questions for Jac. As Jac's former lover, Griffin, assists her in the pursuit to recreate the elixir based on notes left behind by René le Florentine, the two are drawn into the past life of René, his lover Isabeau, and the dynamic, manipulative Catherine de Médiçi." —Stacey Harris, Books & Books, Coral Gables, FL

Learning to Walk in the Dark, by Barbara Brown Taylor (HarperOne, $24.99)

"Why are we so quick to light the night, to focus only on the positive, and to dismiss discomfort? When is the last time you noticed darkness within you, took a moment to figure out its source, and then let it be? Taylor set out to do just that in her new memoir. She wanted to learn how our culture has lost its balance by demonizing darkness and how she might regain equilibrium. Taylor watched the moon rise, explored a cave, and delved into the writings of those who had already embraced the shadows to remind us that even in the dark, we can find strength." —Hannah Johnson-Breimeier, Boswell Book Company, Milwaukee, WI

Flora: A Novel, by Gail Godwin (Bloomsbury, $16) "In the last months of America's war with Japan, 10-year-old Helen is left in the care of a relative from Alabama while her father leaves to work on a secret government project. A polio scare soon quarantines the two women at home, unable to escape each other. The trouble, as Helen sees it, is that she is the most mature female in the house. Helen believes she is the one in control, until tragedy strikes on a deserted road one evening and she discovers the truth. Anyone curious as to why Gail Godwin has been honored with so many awards only needs to read this book to learn why." —Hunter Coleman, The Alabama Booksmith, Birmingham, AL

Two Speckled Eggs, by Jennifer K. Mann
(Candlewick, $14.99) "When Ginger's mom insists that she invite all the girls in her class—or none—to her birthday party, Ginger is disappointed that she has to include Lyla, who is a bit, well, different from the others. But when things don't go quite as planned at the party, Ginger finds a new friend when she least expects it. A wonderful story of friendship with a great message about acceptance and kindness!" —Kaley DeCoursey, R.J. Julia Booksellers, Madison, CT
