The Late Starters Orchestra, by Ari L. Goldman (Algonquin Books, $22.95) "This is a lovely and humorous memoir from Goldman, a journalist in New York City, who decides to take up his cello again after 25 years. After playing successfully in his 11-year-old son's youth orchestra, Ari decides it is time to join The Late Starters Orchestra, a group of adults who gather once a week to work on orchestral music. As adults, it can be overwhelming to push ourselves to try something new, from joining a local soccer league or training for a marathon, to writing a book or taking a computer course. Goldman proves it is truly never too late." —Kelly Evert, Village Books, Bellingham, WA

The Ice Cream Queen of Orchard Street: A Novel, by Susan Jane Gilman (Grand Central Publishing, $26) "Gilman offers a narrator who is by turns heartbreakingly sympathetic, stubborn, passionate, ruthless, ingratiating, exasperating, clever, and insufferable in an immigrant success story with many unexpected twists. Soon after young Lillian arrives from Russia, her unreliable father disappears. When an accident cripples Lillian, she is abandoned by her unstable mother. Readers follow Lillian through her joining and losing a family, a marriage to an Errol Flynn look-alike, the creation of a wildly successful business, a visit to the White House, and an assault charge—at age 74! What a character! What a book!" —Banna Rubinow, the river's end bookstore, Oswego, NY
