Other Indie Favorites

The Glass Kitchen: A Novel of Sisters, by Linda Francis Lee (St. Martin's Press, $25.99)

"The Glass Kitchen is a charming story of sisters, cooking, and starting over. Portia moves to New York City to be with her sisters after a humiliating divorce from a rising political star in Texas. Like her beloved grandmother, Portia is gifted with 'The Knowing'—an ability to 'see' a meal that she must cook, even though she does not know who the meal is for or what the circumstances might be. This is a warm and magical tale of love, family, and forgiveness—with some delicious recipes included!"

—Patricia Worth, River Reader, Lexington, MO

The Appetites of Girls: A Novel, by Pamela Moses (Amy Einhorn Books/Putnam, $26.95)

"The relationship women in Western culture have with food is complicated and often fraught with strange rituals and beliefs, unhealthy behavior, guilt, and shame. While potentially triggering for those currently struggling with an eating disorder, the stories shared by the four women in this book are heartfelt and encouraging. From their friendships as roommates at an Ivy League college, each woman's life is detailed through their relationships with food and with other people at defining points in their lives. Their struggles and emotions feel very real and are often all too familiar."
