Other Indie Favorites

A Colder War: A Novel, by Charles Cumming (St. Martin's Press, $26.99) "This is another smashing tale of spycraft from Cumming. MI6 veteran Thomas Kell, who readers will recall from A Foreign Country, is sent to Istanbul to determine what really happened to a colleague killed in the crash of the small plane he was piloting. Beautiful women and treacherous double agents are present, but more prominently the reader experiences the beginning of the psychological wiles that ushered in the eponymous 'colder war.' Cumming's descriptions are so evocative I felt as if I had actually traveled to the Bosphorus and experienced the intrigue firsthand!" —Clay Belcher, Signs of Life, Lawrence, KS

Tigerman: A Novel, by Nick Harkaway (Knopf, 26.95) "Harkaway's books are known for their expansive, fantastical settings and narratives. With Tigerman, he creates a quieter, but no less thrilling novel. It's a story filled with geopolitical and criminal intrigue and escapades, but at its heart Tigerman is about the friendship between a man and the boy he befriends. This is a deeply emotional book, but with the narrative drive of pulp fiction novels. Extremely satisfying on all levels." —Vladimir Verano, Third Place Books, Lake Forest Park, WA
