Other Indie Favorites

All Days Are Night, by Peter Stamm, Michael Hofmann, Trans. (Other Press, $22) "In All Days Are Night, Stamm watches his characters create art, act in plays, die, love, and mortify each other and themselves, all in the quest for something no one is quite sure of. It is a story of uncertain passion, withheld devotion, and the grief that comes simply from living. Reading this book is like reading something that exists entirely in the margins—confessional but voyeuristic, heartbreaking but apathetic. Stamm negotiates the modern love story with a careful grace and leaves readers wanting more." —Emily Heap, City Lit, Chicago, IL

Sometimes the Wolf: A Novel, by Urban Waite (William Morrow, $26.99) "In this powerful story set amidst the lush landscape of the Northwest, former sheriff Patrick Drake has just been released from prison. As he tries to make a new start with his son, who is a sheriff's deputy in his father's old department, his past comes back to haunt him. Violence from Patrick's old life plays out in the forefront, and the issues of family loss, disappointment, and forgiveness are the backdrop for this rapidly paced, spellbinding novel." —Stephanie Crowe, Page & Palette, Fairhope, AL

Another Indie Favorite

My Mistake: A Memoir, by Daniel Menaker (Mariner, $14.95) "Being a longtime reader of the New Yorker, I found Menaker's behind-the-scenes account of his career there absolutely riveting. The literary life is gutted and splayed for all to see. Menaker's professional story is interspersed with his personal life, and both fed his writing career. His years at Random House and HarperCollins are also included with fascinating details about contemporary authors and how a book is created. This is a must-read for booksellers and serious readers." —Ellen Jarrett, Porter Square Books, Cambridge, MA

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers
Black Ice, by Becca Fitzpatrick (Simon & Schuster Books for Young Readers, $19.99) "Britt has always been in love with Calvin, even eight months after he ended their secret relationship. Now a senior in high school, Britt wants to prove to him that she can survive without him in every way. She and her best friend, Korbie, Calvin's spoiled younger sister, plan a backpacking trip in the Teton Range. However, a chance snow storm forces them to take shelter with two young men who are not what they seem. Black Ice is an impressive book with a riotous, rapid-paced, adrenaline-laden pulse." —Krys Tourtois, Schuler Books & Music, Lansing, MI
