Hoot Owl, Master of Disguise, by Sean Taylor, Jean Jullien (Illus.) (Candlewick, $15.99) "Bold, colorful illustrations complement this suspenseful tale of a clever and hungry little hoot owl. He uses many disguises in his hunt for dinner, but they don't seem to be enough to do the trick. Will his last attempt finally be masterful enough to succeed? You will never look at a decorative birdbath the same way again!" —Ashley Despain, Green Apple Books, San Francisco, CA

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers
Kalahari, by Jessica Khoury (Razorbill, $17.99) "When an educational safari goes wrong, five teens are stranded in the Kalahari Desert without a guide. Sarah, the daughter of zoologists, must keep them alive and get them to safety. Corpus is a scientific research company that experiments on everything and has no regard for the lives that are affected. The result of a Corpus experiment becomes the stranded group's greatest challenge. Filled with first loves, romance, adventure, and a crazy scientific experiment, Kalahari captivates readers from the first page." —Dalene Kolb, Mystery Ink, Huntington Beach, CA
