Another Indie Favorite for Middle Grade Readers

Catch You Later, Traitor, by Avi (Algonquin Young Readers, $16.95) "It is 1951 and Senator Joseph McCarthy's search for Communists is reaching its zenith. No one and nothing seems to be safe from his reach. Twelve-year-old Pete Collison leads a normal life. He goes to school and enjoys reading Sam Spade novels and listening to the radio, so when his teacher suddenly accuses him and his family of being Communists he has no idea why. Then the FBI shows up at his apartment and wants him to spy on his parents and report any un-American activities. When Pete starts to investigate, he is amazed when he uncovers a family history that he never knew about." —Janice Hunsche, Kaleidosaurus Books, Metamora, IN

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers

The Alex Crow, by Andrew Smith (Dutton Juvenile, $18.99) "A summer camp for tech-addicted teenage boys. A failed 19th-century Arctic expedition. A schizophrenic man who hallucinates Joseph Stalin. A boy in a clown suit hiding in a refrigerator while his village is ravaged. These stories—while independently absurd—are woven together with Smith's trademark wit and existential scrutiny to create a Russian nesting doll of literary brilliance. Evoking elements of Kurt Vonnegut and David Mitchell, Smith once again pushes the boundaries of young adult literature and the concept of 'genre' altogether." —Lelia Nebeker, One More Page, Arlington, VA
