Other Indie Favorites

The Turner House: A Novel, by Angela Flournoy (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, $23) "The greatest testament to the skill of a writer is the ability to make what might seem alien to the reader completely recognizable and utterly engaging. Such was my experience reading The Turner House. Mine is a tiny white family from a small town with no sense of heritage, yet during every moment I spent with the Turners—a family of 13 children shaped by the Great Migration to Detroit—I felt at home. Their struggles and joys are universal yet told with an exacting eye that always finds the perfect detail. This is a truly impressive debut." —Kim Fox, Schuler Books & Music, Grand Rapids, MI

The Memory Painter: A Novel, by Gwendolyn Womack (Picador, $26) "Most of us can't remember our early childhoods. What if, thanks to a powerful experimental pharmaceutical, you could access ancient memories—not your own, but other people's—and acquire their skill sets and languages, too? Neurogenetics may be a new frontier, but for artist Bryan Pierce, it's not about a drug, it's all about dreams—dreams in which he might be re-experiencing lives stretching back millennia and gaining dangerous knowledge. Womack couples modern science with imaginative concepts of time, history, and myth in this masterful debut." —Barbara Peters, The Poisoned Pen, Scottsdale, AZ
