Another Indie Favorite for Ages 9 to 12
Close to the Wind, by Jon Walter (David Fickling Books, $17.99) "Close to the Wind shows readers what modern war is like from the perspective of a 10-year-old boy, Malik. There are no battlefields or bodies, just the frightening and confusing reality that many urban refugees continue to face during political upheaval. Walter does not name the country that Malik is escaping or the details of the source of the conflict, allowing readers to concentrate on Malik's tenderhearted character and his responses with the attention and respect that he and others like him deserve." —Clare Doornbos, DIESEL: A Bookstore, Larkspur, CA

Another Indie Favorite
Lost in the Sun, by Lisa Graff (Philomel, $16.99) "In the seven months since he was responsible for a hockey accident that resulted in a friend's death, Trent has become increasingly convinced that everyone—his brothers, his dad, his friends—hates him. He has been dealing with the guilt by withdrawing from the world, until the resident 'weird girl,' Fallon, reaches out to him. She understands rejection because of the scar on her face. With Fallon's friendship, Trent slowly realizes the power of forgiveness and letting go. Graff tackles deep subjects successfully and provides a resolution that is both heartfelt and fitting." —Melissa Fox, Watermark Books & Café, Wichita, KS
