Mad Scientist Academy: The Dinosaur Disaster, by Matthew McElligott (Crown Books for Young Readers, $17.99) "When a group of students — including a werewolf, a swamp monster, and a robot — arrive at Mad Scientist Academy for their first day of class, they find their professor in a tangled heap. Dr. Cosmic explains that their class pet — a dinosaur! — has escaped. The students set off on a scavenger hunt, collecting clues along the way. Engaging facts in a fun adventure make this graphic novel a worthwhile addition to any collection." —Sara Grochowski, Brilliant Books, Traverse City, MI

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers
We Are All Made of Molecules, by Susin Nielsen (Wendy Lamb Books, $16.99) "If, as 13-year-old Stewart knows, we are all in a constant exchange of molecular matter, then author Nielsen has unleashed trillions of atoms with her writing and can expect them to arrive back to her — and to the readers of this amazing story of family blended, friends bended, and the science of what it means to be human — proven. Fans of Wonder, hold tight. This could be the young adult book of the year." —Joanna Parzakonis, Bookbug, Kalamazoo, MI
