The Golden Specific, by S.E. Grove (Viking Books for Young Readers, $17.99) "The Glass Sentence introduced a world unhinged from time and space in 1799 by the Great Disruption, which plunged different areas of the world into completely different historical periods. In The Golden Specific, 13-year-old Sophia Timms, apprentice mapmaker to her Uncle Shadrake, and her friend Theo have been searching for her explorer parents, who disappeared many years ago while on an expedition. When Sophia discovers a clue to their destination, she embarks on a journey to a dangerous part of the disrupted world and meets new characters along the way." —Pam Stilp, Boswell Book Company, Milwaukee, WI

Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers

A Court of Thorns and Roses, by Sarah J. Maas (Bloomsbury, $18.99) "After her father loses his wealth, Feyre, a young girl in her teens, must hunt to keep her impoverished family. When she kills a faerie disguised as a wolf, Tamlin, one of his fellow immortals, invades her home and demands that she pay the penalty: she must spend the rest of her life in his kingdom or face death. Resigned to imprisonment, Feyre discovers that Tamlin is no ordinary faerie, but a High Lord. In spite of herself, love for him blossoms in her young heart and she strives to help him combat ancient threats to his kingdom. A Court of Thorns and Roses is the first in a new series that promises magic, love, and adventure." —Staci Rice, Bluebird Books, Hutchinson, KS
