God's Kingdom: A Novel, by Howard Frank Mosher (St. Martin's Press, $25.99) "If the past is a foreign country, we certainly have an expert native guide in Mosher, who recreates perfectly, right down to the smoky fire smoldering in the town dump, the small town of Kingdom Common, Vermont, in the 1950s. Here, fans of previous books are reintroduced to Jim Kinneson, now entering high school. For first-time readers, the ubiquitous, multi-generational Kinneson clan will be immediately accessible through the talent of master storyteller Mosher in this latest variation on the themes of tradition, the burden of family history, small-town secrets, and the stark beauty of the wilds of Northern Vermont." —Darwin Ellis, Books on the Common, Ridgefield, CT

Bats of the Republic: An Illuminated Novel, by Zachary Thomas Dodson (Doubleday, $27.95) "Bats of the Republic is a book connoisseur's dream. It is a propulsive novel—often a novel within a novel—that shatters the restraints of genre with brilliance matched only by its complexity and originality. Dodson weaves a story from a past filled with hope and regret together with a future rife with promise and dire consequences to keep the reader engaged throughout. Complete with maps and ephemera that make this a singular reading experience, Bats of the Republic is gorgeous, unputdownable, and, above all in this day and age, necessary." —Javier Ramirez, The Book Table, Oak Park, IL
