Another Indie Favorite for Teen Readers Beastly Bones: A Jackaby Novel, by William Ritter (Algonquin Young Readers, $17.95)

"First, a cat has suddenly shape-shifted into a fish and then its owner is mysteriously murdered. Next, fossils of a giant, unknown creature go missing. The second book in Ritter's Jackaby series teams Jackaby, a fantastical Sherlock Holmes, and Abigail Rook, his intuitive and intelligent Watson, with a host of characters to solve the case. With the aid of two paleontologists, a werewolf police detective, a big game hunter, and an intrepid reporter, Abigail and Jackaby must solve this mystery of a monster murdering people and mangling livestock."

Orbiting Jupiter, by Gary D. Schmidt (Clarion Books, $17.99)

"Schmidt plumbs the depths of love and the binding forces of the universe as readers witness 14-year-old Joseph Brook's story unfold within his new foster family. Joseph's past keeps him guarded, marked by those who only see his prior transgressions, but it also propels him to find and protect the one closest to his heart. Through the voice of Jack, his compassionate, 12-year-old foster brother, readers glean why Joseph cries out in the night and why he cannot be approached from behind. Schmidt expertly guides readers through an emotional landscape that brings both bitter and joyous tears as he reveals what grace and loyalty really mean."
