Carrying Albert Home: The Somewhat True Story of a Man, His Wife, and Her Alligator, by Homer Hickam (William Morrow, $25.99)

"This thoroughly delightful story chronicles Hickam's parents' road trip from their coal-mining town in West Virginia to Orlando, Florida, to return Elsie Hickam's pet alligator, Albert, to a home in a more suitable climate. Along the way, the travelers—Homer Sr., Elsie, Albert, and an elusive rooster—encounter famous American authors, movie stars, and minor league baseball teams and become embroiled in union strikes and bank robberies. It's hard to say what is true and what isn't, but either way, Carrying Albert Home is a very enjoyable journey!" —Lori-Jo Scott, Island Bookstore, Kitty Hawk, NC

Along the Infinite Sea: A Novel, by Beatriz Williams (Putnam, $26.95)

"Heroines in different decades, Annabelle and Pepper both know the peril of loving a man seemingly always just beyond their reach as well as the need to escape in order to survive. Williams' novel follows Annabelle through the hurdles life throws her way in the years preceding World War II in Europe, as well as the parallel trials and tribulations of Pepper during the 1960s. These complicated women meet when Pepper sells her restored Mercedes to Annabelle as a way to raise money for her own escape plan. Together, Annabelle and Pepper come to rescue each other and learn that sometimes love can survive life's trials." —Dell Marie Swearer, Bluebird Books, Hutchinson, KS
