Other Indie Favorites

The Gentleman: A Novel, by Forrest Leo (Penguin Press, 9780399562631, $26) "Fast-paced, funny, and extremely enjoyable, The Gentleman has fantastic elements and intriguing characters tied together with smart dialogue and timing reminiscent of a Baz Luhrman film. Badly behaved Victorian ladies, indolent poets, an exasperated editor, intrepid British adventurers, steampunk inventors, omniscient butlers, a genteel Devil, and a number of cunning plans combine to make this debut novel exciting and amusing." —Jennifer Richter, Inkwood Books, Haddonfield, NJ

A House Without Windows: A Novel, by Nadia Hashimi (William Morrow, 9780062449689, $26.99) "Hashimi sets her layered and suspenseful novel at the crossroads of tradition and modernity in present-day Afghanistan. Her nuanced and well-paced tale tells the story of Zeba, who is accused of murdering her husband. In the Chil Mahtab prison, where Zeba awaits her trial and sentencing, she comes to know a colorful cast of female inmates, many of whom are ordinary women who have been snared in various traps of family honor and have been cast away by their families and by society. This is a compassionately written and moving page-turner." —Marya Johnston, Out West Books, Grand Junction, CO
