Other Indie Favorites

The Old Man, by Thomas Perry (Mysterious Press, $26) "Dan Chase is a wealthy old man living a quiet life after the death of his wife and his daughter's move to another part of the country. But wait—he is being followed; then his house is broken into and he is forced to kill the intruder. Next, Chase turns to his 'go' bag—it seems he has many identities, stashes of currency, and a plan to disappear. There are secrets to be discovered all throughout this tale and Perry keeps readers wondering what will come next. This is definitely one of Perry's best!" —Barbara Kelly, Kelly's Books to Go, South Portland, ME

Who Watcheth: An Inspector Irene Huss Investigation, by Helene Tursten, Marlaine Delargy (Trans.) (Soho Crime, $26.95) "Tursten does not disappoint in the ninth installment of her impeccable Inspector Irene Huss Investigation series, moving it forward on a perfect note with Irene and her husband, Krister, beginning a new stage in their lives. One of the things I've always admired about this series, in addition to Irene's strength and intelligence, is the normalcy of her life. I loved this book, but I was so busy racing through it to unravel the various threads that now I need to read it again slowly and savor it. You will, too!" —Eileen McGervey, One More Page Books, Arlington, VA
