For Ages 9 to 12

Prisoner of Ice and Snow, by Ruth Lauren (Bloomsbury U.S.A. Children's Books, $16.99)
"Valor has a plan. She will almost shoot the prince, get herself sent to prison, find her sister, and break her out. What could go wrong? The first part of her plan goes perfectly, but Valor soon realizes that there is more to this prison, and to her sister's imprisonment, than meets the eye. Full of satisfying twists and turns, not to mention a unique matriarchal society, Valor's tale will have you on the edge of your seat from start to finish." —Molly Olivo, Barstons Child's Play, Washington, DC

For Teen Readers

Blood Rose Rebellion, by Rosalyn Eves (Knopf Books for Young Readers, $17.99)
"Anna lives in a world filled with magic, but only those who can pay the circle's price have access to it. Anna's family is well off, yet Anna is deemed barren—any spell cast in Anna's presence goes awry! Without magic, Anna is not accepted in the world of pomp and circumstance. All that begins to change when the circle takes a special interest in Anna. What is so different about her? What trouble may she cause? In the beginning, this book seems like a cross between The Dark Days Club and A Shadow Bright and Burning, but hold tight because it holds its own." —Kelsey Morrison, Moravian Book Shop, Bethlehem, PA
