Other Indie Favorites

Salt Houses: A Novel, by Hala Alyan (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, $26) “Accomplished poet Hala Alyan exceeds the brilliance of her excellent collections of poems in her moving, powerfully realized first novel, Salt Houses. I can’t think of many writers who have so adeptly written of family relationships. From Palestine to Jordan, Lebanon to Kuwait, Boston to New York, this is a story of people losing, finding, and making their way. Salt Houses gives voice, body, and love to people whose lives in this country tend, at most, to be featured anonymously in news accounts—and at that, in the negative. This is real life, beautifully written and graciously enlarging the sense of who we are.” —Rick Simonson, The Elliott Bay Book Company, Seattle, WA

Miss Burma: A Novel, by Charmaine Craig (Grove Press, $26) “Charmaine Craig’s Miss Burma is nothing short of stunning. Based on the lives of her mother and grandparents, Craig deftly tells the epic story of one family in Burma as they try to survive the horrors of World War II, independence, and then civil war. What distinguishes this book from others is its frank look at who and what survives under such perilous conditions. Miss Burma is a chronicle of loss and love in a country too long neglected by the world.” —Michael Triebwasser, Politics and Prose Bookstore, Washington, DC
