For Ages 9 to 12

The Thicket: The Last Spell, by J.A. White, Andrea Offerman (Illus.) (Katherine Tegen Books, $16.99) "New and old foes meet their fates in this conclusion to The Thicket series. The strength of the books relies on never knowing who is truly on the 'right' side of things and that theme continues from start to finish in the fourth volume. Satisfyingly, answers to story lore arise: Why could only girls and women, not boys and men, use grimoires? Why has the one-eyed bird been so helpful? Is the Well of Witches truly a place of forever torture?" —Todd Wellman, Boswell Book Company, Milwaukee, WI

For Teen Readers

Radio Silence, by Alice Oseman (HarperTeen, $17.99) "In a sea of over-achieving high schoolers, you're forced to play the game, but it's just not you. You're a different person when you're not at school, but you feel you need to hide it. You're scared to rock the boat, until you meet your first true friend, which, to me, is what this novel is all about. Radio Silence has so many facets: it's contemporary YA, but each chapter begins with a sci-fi-esque podcast, which miraculously weaves itself into the story; it lightly explores sexual identity and diversity, but this doesn't disrupt the story; and it has an element of mystery and a thriller-like pace but digs deep. One of my favorite books of 2017." —Kristen Gilligan, Tattered Cover Book Store, Denver, CO
