For Ages 9 to 12

The First Rule of Punk by Celia C. Pérez (Viking Books for Young Readers, $16.99) "What do you do when your mom moves you to Chicago, far away from your friends, your dad, and his record shop? If you're Malu, you make zines to express your feelings, find your people at school, and start a punk band to reinvent traditional Mexican music. This tour-de-force debut will have you smiling, singing, and cheering for Malu as she explores her family history, culture, and community and comes to better understand herself. A must-have middle-grade book." —Cecilia Cackley, East City Bookshop, Washington, DC

For Teen Readers

All Rights Reserved by Gregory Scott Katsoulis (Harlequin Teen, $18.99) "In a dystopian future in which words and gestures are copyrighted and citizens are charged for the most basic forms of communication, the ultimate act of resistance may be to choose silence. In this richly imagined novel, Katsoulis explores free speech and the consequences of intellectual property law through characters that are sympathetic, tough, and thoroughly believable. All Rights Reserved is an excellent sci-fi thriller with a great sense of humor and a political conscience. For anyone who feels the need for a bit of revolution in their fiction, this book is just the thing." —Annie Farrell, Labyrinth Books, Princeton, NJ
