Other Indie Favorites

Sunburn: A Novel, by Laura Lippman (William Morrow, $26.99) "Sunburn pays homage to the novels of James M. Cain, offering up crooked cops, handsome drifters, and, of course, a femme fatale. Watch the secrets unravel as a runaway wife with an ugly past takes up in a small town. Lovers of noir will delight in the familiar tropes. We know she's bad, but how bad is she? Will an affair between two untrustworthy people turn into true love? Sunburn is the perfect book to take on that spring break to a sunny locale. Pour the lemonade and lay out your beach towel!"
—Sarah Sorensen, Bookbug, Kalamazoo, MI

The Last Equation of Isaac Severy: A Novel in Clues, by Nova Jacobs (Touchstone, $25) "Isaac Severy has died and taken the secret of his last mathematical equation with him. Except that he has also hidden clues to a hiding place for this final work and shares these clues with his adopted granddaughter, Hazel, who he has charged with finding his treasure and getting it into the hands of a trusted colleague. But she's not the only one looking for his equation, and some of the other searchers are dangerous indeed. This inviting mystery allows us to follow along as Hazel makes her way toward the answer, so put on your thinking cap and get out your best clue-solving approach—you'll need all the help you can get. I absolutely loved this debut!"
