My Ex-Life: A Novel, by Stephen McCauley (Flatiron Books, $25.99) "This story of loves both great and small is most certainly not saccharine sweet. My Ex-Life reminds us that there is a reason for everything, and that sometimes it's wise to go back to the familiar (albeit old) parts of ourselves to remind us just how far we've come. Stephen McCauley writes like your best friend—the one who always says what you're thinking but you'd never have the guts to utter out loud. His perception of even the mundane tasks of life reveals a witty tone dripping with self-deprecation and amusement. This book is most certainly one you should put at the top of your to-be-read pile!" —Jordan Arias, Anderson's Bookshop, Naperville, IL

First, We Make the Beast Beautiful: A New Journey Through Anxiety, by Sarah Wilson (Dey Street Books, $25.99) "First, We Make the Beast Beautiful evokes the strange and magical feeling of having discovered a personal journal in a public place. It is first and foremost a memoir that tackles difficult subjects, touching on many experiences, both traumatic and constructive, that the author feels have affected her journey through anxiety. A great deal of the book is spiritual and suggests that anxiety is the product of an unrest in the soul. Fans of Rupi Kaur will enjoy the candid rawness of this book, as it pulls them through a journey that is perhaps all too painfully familiar." —Kaitie Radel, The Oxford Exchange, Tampa, FL
