For Ages 9 to 12

Dactyl Hill Squad, by Daniel José Older (Arthur A. Levine Books, $16.99) "This book walks the awesome tightrope of acknowledging that fantasy could not possibly create villains more horrifying than the true figures of history, while allowing kids to engage with the fantastic that makes those realities bearable. This book lets kids see themselves as the heroes of historical fiction and shows them pieces of history that may have been left out of their lessons. At the same time, it's a great adventure with a dynamic team at its core who are a joy to meet and adventure with. And also? DINOSAURS!" —Katherine Ferguson, Harvard Book Store, Cambridge, MA

For Teen Readers

The War Outside, by Monica Hesse (Little, Brown Books for Young Readers, $17.99) "These teens couldn't be more different: Haruko, Japanese American, outgoing, popular, compliant; and Margot, German American, reclusive, mistrustful, analytical. But what they have in common is more important: they're members of families in turmoil, and in 1944 they're living in an internment camp for enemy aliens. This riveting novel takes readers where we've never imagined going, with twists, turns, and startling intensity. The book is mesmerizing, empathetic, and incredibly timely in its treatment of injustice and fear of the other." —Banna Rubinow, the river's end bookstore, Oswego, NY
