For Ages 9 to 12

The House With Chicken Legs, by Sophie Anderson (Scholastic Press, $16.99) "Twelve-year-old Marinka is not like most girls. She has a pet jackdaw, a founding lamb, a yaga for a grandmother, and a house that routinely walks, runs, or canters to an entirely new location without consulting its occupants. What Marinka THINKS she wants most is to just be a normal girl with normal friends and the chance to determine her own future. What Marinka REALLY wants is indeed something very, very different. A bit of folk tale, a dose of adventure, and a lot of quirky humor tossed in, The House With Chicken Legs takes readers on a ride they will not soon forget." —Angie Tally, The Country Bookshop, Southern Pines, NC

Indies Introduce

For Teen Readers

Mirage, by Somaiya Daud (Flatiron Books, $18.99)

"Amani is stolen from her home on the moon of Cadiz and forced to serve as the princess's double for the heartless Vathek, usurpers of her people. With her life at stake, Amani must now learn how to think and act like her enemies while trying to keep true to her own people's outlawed customs and beliefs—and to herself. Whereas some young women might become depressed and lose hope in the face of such a loss of control, Amani boldly embraces her new circumstances with a rare surety; she waits, and she plans. The narration is poetic, the worldbuilding beautifully crafted. This Moroccan-influenced fusion of fantasy and science fiction is a positively stunning debut novel."

—Leah Atlee, Changing Hands, Tempe, AZ
