Other Indie Favorites

- Run Me to Earth: A Novel, by Paul Yoon (Simon & Schuster, $26)
  “This is Paul Yoon’s best work yet. While this is also his most chaotic book, the power of his writing can still be found in the quiet moments, in gestures toward reconciliation, forgiveness, or at least resolution. This novel is stunning in its rendering of our capacity for both savagery and tenderness. Yoon is one of our great masters, and Run Me to Earth is a masterpiece.”
  —Joseph Nieves, Changing Hands, Tempe, AZ

- The Resisters: A Novel, by Gish Jen (Knopf, $26.95)
  “I finished The Resisters in a day. I don’t know how a book can be so devastating yet so miraculously wonderful at the same time. I was completely captivated by the family whose story Jen tells. The world she creates—is set in near-future AutoAmerica—is so believable an outcome of what we see around us today that it feels as much prescient as imagined. A sort of cautionary tale, The Resisters is not only a book to love, it’s a book that’s important. I’m in awe.”

Another Indie Favorite

The Stationery Shop: A Novel, by Marjan Kamali (Gallery Books, $16)

“The Stationery Shop is one of the most beautifully written novels I have read in a long time. The masterful plot brings us to a lost time and culture, but also transcends time and country. In a story set against the upheaval of 1953 Tehran, we discover how events change the destiny of two teenagers who meet in a book and stationery shop and fall in love. This novel of political dreams, family loyalty, lingering memories, love, and fate will haunt you long after the story ends.” —Janet Hutchison, The Open Door Bookstore, Schenectady, NY

Race to the Sun, by Rebecca Roanhorse (Rick Riordan Presents, $16.99) “Nizhoni Begay is a heroine you won’t soon forget! Roanhorse delves into Native American mythology with glee as Nizhoni learns about her heritage and what it takes to become a hero. With a colorful cast of characters—Mr. Yazzie the horned toad being a personal favorite—it’s a race to the sun god for mythical weapons so Nizhoni and company can free her father from a tyrannical monster (who also happens to be an oil baron).” —Sami Thomason, Square Books, Oxford, MS

For Teen Readers

Three Things I Know Are True, by Betty Culley (HarperTeen, $18.99) “Topical, deeply honest, and important, this book has an edge that is painful and sharp but softened with the cadence of verse. The ripple effect of Jonah’s foolish actions pulses violently outward and crashes into friends, family, and the larger community. Three things I know are true: this book captures the subject matter seriously and accurately, it starts a necessary dialogue, and it might change some lives.” —Nichole Cousins, Still North Books & Bar, Hanover, NH

Bad Dog, by Mike Boldt (Doubleday Books for Young Readers, $17.99) “Rocky is a very bad dog; she doesn’t do tricks or listen to her human’s orders. She’s very good at catlike things, though, like clawing things up and sleeping. Bad Dog has adorable seeping out of every page as Rocky’s human tells readers all about her! Every cat owner will find their own fluffy friends in these accurate illustrations of feline mischief and love.” —Andrew King, University Book Store, Seattle, WA
