Other Indie Favorites

The Vanishing Sky: A Novel, by L. Annette Binder (Bloomsbury Publishing, $27) “In the waning months of WWII, as allied forces are closing in from both sides, the devastation of war has reached the Huber family as it struggles to stay intact. With an older son changed forever by the Eastern Front, a younger son heading out to the Western Front, and a husband growing increasingly nationalistic and senile, a mother keeps pushing forward with the hope of having her whole family back together under one roof. In this incredibly moving and personal look at the destruction of Germany that ultimately ended the war, Binder tackles a range of issues within countries and families. In the realm of historical fiction, The Vanishing Sky is a true standout.” —Carl Kranz, Fountain Bookstore, Richmond, VA

Miracle Country: A Memoir, by Kendra Atleeework (Algonquin Books, $27.95) “Miracle Country is one of those books that takes on the personality of the place in which it’s set, and in the case of the Owens River Valley, that personality is starkly beautiful and full of rugged vitality. Atleeework’s unflinching combination of personal and natural exploration is the perfect complement to the backdrop of the High Sierra, and she somehow manages to encapsulate both the allure and the contemptuousness of the mountains—and existence in general—through an examination of her own life. Harsh and brutal, resplendent and inviting, this book makes the Sierra Nevada tangible in a way that only great writing can.” —David Nurick, Cellar Door Books, Riverside, CA
