Other Indie Favorites

“An affecting, multigenerational coming-of-age story about a young Syrian American artist’s discovery of self and the truth behind his mother’s mysterious passing. Featuring alternating perspectives that weave the past into the present, this novel embodies the epistolary not just in form and address, but in the way it reads like a love letter to New York City, especially the immigrant, working-class, and LGBTQ underground of New York. A book with a heartbeat, despite all its ghosts.”
—Serena Morales, Books Are Magic, Brooklyn, NY

A Certain Hunger: A Novel, by Chelsea G. Summers (The Unnamed Press, $26)
“A surprising novel that will lure you in with its delicious writing and leave you hungry (in more ways than one). Food critic Dorothy Daniels wants good food and good sex, and she will go to whatever lengths she needs in order to get them. At once a critique of the food industry and a criminal’s account, A Certain Hunger is a stunning feminist page-turner. With its devious protagonist and delectable prose, you will devour this novel.”
—Marika McCoola, Porter Square Books, Cambridge, MA

How to Fail at Flirting: A Novel, by Denise Williams (Berkley, $16) “A sweet romance about a professor who decides to take a chance when she finds herself out at a bar by herself seated next to an attractive man in town on business. Naya never would have imagined that their one-night stand would turn into a week-long fling with the potential for even more. And because of her toxic past relationships, she is hesitant to trust Jake. I loved reading about a professor as a romance leading lady!” —Kate Storhoff, Bookmarks, Winston-Salem, NC

For Ages 9 to 12

Fantastic Tales of Nothing, by Alejandra Green, Fanny Rodriguez (Katherine Tegen Books, hardcover, $22.99; paperback, $12.99)
“Despite its name, Nothing is a land filled with magic, ancient legends, shapeshifters, and one not-so-ordinary human named Nathan who is about to embark on a quest to save everything (err...Nothing). Alejandra Green and Fanny Rodriguez bring their respective animation and video game design experience to this middle-grade fantasy filled with humor, mystery, adventure, and plenty of action! This dynamic start to a new graphic novel series will appeal to fans of the Amulet and Estranged book series.” —Kinsey Forman, High Five Books, Florence, MA

For Teen Readers

The Love Curse of Melody McIntyre, by Robin Talley (HarperTeen, $17.99)
“Any theater nerd, especially those who enjoyed the epic highs and lows of high school theater, will gobble up this book and enjoy every second. Everything rang so true and felt incredibly real! I adored every character—and found myself listening to the Les Mis soundtrack while reading!” —Abby Bennsky, Old Town Books, Alexandria, VA
