American Dervish
A Novel, by Ayad Akhtar
(Back Bay Books, 9780316183307, $14.99)
"At its simplest, American Dervish is a coming-of-age story. At its most complex, it is a story of religious faith, marital strife, human nature, love, envy, sexual awakening, betrayal, and racism. It is impossible to leave Akhtar's exceptional debut novel without experiencing the struggles and pain of young Hayat as he comes to terms with both his Muslim faith and his humanity."

I Married You for Happiness
A Novel, by Lily Tuck
(Grove Press, 9780821459181, $14)
"Lily Tuck's new novel is a gem. Sitting beside the body of her husband who has died unexpectedly while she was making dinner, Nina spends the whole night with his body, remembering their marriage of 43 years—the early years as well as the highlights, both the good and the difficult. Written with honesty by a woman who clearly understands relationships and all of the intimacies and secrets that go along with marriage, this is a novel to be savored."

The Marriage Plot
A Novel, by Jeffrey Eugenides
(Picador, 9781250014764, $16)
"Have all the great love stories already been written? What relevance do Jane Austen or George Eliot have for today's woman? In the 1980s, Madeline is wrestling with these questions both for her college thesis and as a woman fielding the attentions of two young men. Leonard is charismatic, flawed, and tragic, so Madeline, of course, drawn to him; Mitchell is a seeker who is trying to figure out how he fits into the general scheme of the universe, and he is totally smitten by Madeline. Eugenides has brilliantly succeeded in writing a new love story for our times!"

Dominance
A Novel, by Will Lavender
(Simon & Schuster, 9781451617306, $16)
"Don't read this evil, fiendishly good thriller. Don't ask why a cold-blooded axe murderer would be permitted to speak to a group of college students, let alone teach a class. Dominance is about secrets, power, and murder. It's a disturbing book, and readers will definitely find themselves manipulated by the author. If you are foolish enough to start reading this book, be warned that you will not be able to stop. Be sure to leave the lights on when you're finished!"
—Geoffrey Jennings, Rainy Day Books, Fairway, KS

The Prague Cemetery
A Novel, by Umberto Eco, Richard Dixon (Trans.)
(Mariner, 9780547844206, $15.95)
"In Eco's latest work, we follow the exploits of a split-personality secret agent and forger who traffics around 19th-century Europe involving himself in many of the key events of the day. From Garibaldi's campaign to the United Italian Republic to the Paris Commune to the Dreyfus Affair, he plants bombs, attends black masses, and forges documents playing one conspiracy against another. As always, Eco spins this all into a riveting and engaging tale."

Midnight Rising
John Brown and the Raid That Sparked the Civil War, by Tony Horwitz
(Picador, 9780312429263, $18)
"The Civil War had its origins long before Fort Sumter, but possibly the biggest spark was provided by one extremely intense, driven man, John Brown. Brown's raid on Harpers Ferry in 1859 not only provided a frightening specter to nervous southern slave owners, it was also a moral slap in the face to the rest of the country, especially during his trial. The long-range effects of one man and his moral passion are superbly rendered by the award-winning Horwitz."

The Orphan Master's Son
A Novel, by Adam Johnson
(Random House Trade Paperback, 9780802145925, $15)
"Sometimes we forget that a book tries to be too many things. This thought-provoking novel is many things—an adventure tale, an examination of identity and the nature of the self, a meta-narrative, a political novel, a love story, a survivor story, and more—and it succeeds on all counts. Like the works of David Mitchell, The Orphan Master's Son is at once a joy to read, a challenging work, and ultimately, a terrific and satisfying read."

The Boy in the Suitcase
by Lene Kaaberbol and Agnete Friis
(Soho Crime, 9781616951696, $15.95)
"Not just another Scandinavian thriller, this book catches your attention from page one! Red Cross nurse Nina Borg gets caught up in a terrible series of events, when her erstwhile friend asks for help and leaves her a key to a public locker. The locker contains a suitcase that is unbearably awkward to carry, and when Nina opens it, she finds a naked, unconscious little boy. Who is this boy, and what does he have to be saved from? A great introduction to an award-winning team of Danish authors."
—Margaret Brennan Neville, The King's English, Salt Lake City, UT

Written with honesty by a woman who clearly understands relationships and all of the intimacies and secrets that go along with marriage, this is a novel to be savored."
—Penny McConnell, Norwich Bookstore, Norwich, VT

"This powerful, lyrical little book is unlike any I've recently read. Told from the point of view of the youngest of three brothers, this unique coming-of-age story takes an intimate look at a Brooklyn family bound together by a dangerous love and constantly on the brink of a tenuous unravel. The narrator's magical, childlike view of the world makes the tense scenes even more vivid, more real, and more unforgettable. We The Animals is an enchanting, haunting novel."

What It Is Like to Go to War
by Karl Marlantes
(Grove Press, 9780802145925, $15)
"This is a courageous, noble, and intelligent grapple with myth, history, and spirituality that beautifully elevates the role of the military in today's world. Marlantes volunteers his knowledge and experience (and really, his soul) to the cause of crafting the model of a just and ethical warrior in the 21st century. The long-overdue reckoning that Marlantes' novel Matterhorn deftly demanded of America is enhanced and extended with this new work. It is an emotional, honest, and affecting primer for all Americans on war and the national psyche. We ignore this book at our own peril."
